

Call for Proposals

This Consultation seeks submissions on the following topics:

- The impact of Paula Gunn Allen's work on women of color theologies and scholarships
- Immigration debates (particularly SB 1070) and their impacts on diverse communities of color
- Cross-coalition organizing between communities of color
- Technology and global poverty
- Makers of women's religious myths

Mission

This Consultation fosters intellectual exchange in the fields of religious studies and theology as they are developing in diverse communities of color from a gendered analysis. While the AAR features Program Units from diverse communities of color, we provide a space for conversation between communities of color. This Consultation does not assume a prior "women of color" identity, but centers a woman of color analytic that deconstructs the intersecting logics of gender and race. At the same time, we do not hold to a "post-identity" framework and are also concerned with the status of women of color in the academy, the politics of pedagogy, and the relationship between women-of-color-centered activism and scholarship. Understanding identity as performative and shifting, we make the very category of "women of color" itself a site for political and intellectual engagement.
