665 North 301 Street Museum of Maryland African American

Visitors will learn how 200 years of slavery wrenched and sometimes broke the bonds of family and community among African Americans in Maryland. Men, women, and children were torn from their loved ones, isolated, and sold to strangers. Yet Maryland's African Americans continuously renewed these bonds of family and community. Black Marylanders created tools for survival and self-determination, proving the power of their commitment to one another by rebuilding families and sustaining communities of worship, neighborhoods, towns, and social organizations. Adults: $8.
