

Call for Proposals

This Group invites papers that address:

- The Trinity in Eastern Christian thought, both patristic and modern. Papers are especially welcome that offer a comparative analysis with Latin patristic sources or contemporary Catholic and Protestant trinitarian theologies. We also encourage submissions that offer constructive theological proposals for trinitarian theology that draw from either patristic or contemporary Orthodox theology

- Orthodox Christian political theology — papers could focus on a particular phase within the history of Eastern Christian thought including, but not limited to the Byzantine period, Tsarist Russia, and post-Communist Europe. Papers may be either historical or theological in scope. Papers that address the themes of human rights, church–state relations, and religious pluralism are especially welcome

Mission

This Group exists to study the theology, history, and practice of the Eastern Christian churches, including their mutual interaction with Western Christian and non-Christian groups.
